THE IN-BETWEEN COLLECTION

A QUEEN'S PEACE PALACE GUIDED WORKBOOK

PASSAGE III • CROSS

Welcome to the part nobody can completely map for you.

The old chapter no longer fits. You may have released much of what belonged to it. But the new chapter has not fully materialized yet. This is the space between this isn't me anymore and this is my life now.

CROSS is not about pretending uncertainty feels good. It is about learning how to remain connected to yourself while evidence is incomplete.

SOUL SIGNAL

You are not always lost just because you cannot see the entire road.

YOUR MOVEMENT

ORIENT → TRUST → NAVIGATE → SUSTAIN → KEEP MOVING

The work here is not becoming someone new. It is learning how to stop abandoning the person you already became while your life catches up.

MOVEMENT I • ORIENT

Where Am I, Actually?

The In-Between becomes more frightening when every unknown gets interpreted as evidence that you made the wrong choice. Orientation separates what is truly uncertain from what you already know.

Known / Unknown / Not Mine to Know Yet

I KNOW	I DON'T KNOW YET	I DON'T NEED TO KNOW YET

What becomes less overwhelming when you stop demanding answers from the third column?

Locate Yourself on the Bridge

Mark the statements that sound most like your current position.

- ☐ I know what I left, but not what replaces it.
- ☐ I can feel who I am becoming more clearly than I can see where I am going.
- ☐ My external life still contains evidence of an identity I no longer claim.
- ☐ I keep mistaking delay for a wrong turn.
- ☐ I feel tempted to return to something familiar simply because it is visible.
- ☐ I am building pieces of the next chapter, but they do not feel complete yet.
- ☐ I know more than I give myself credit for.
- ☐ I am exhausted from having to figure everything out as I go.
- ☐ I want movement, not another lesson.
- ☐ I am beginning to see that uncertainty and misalignment are not the same thing.

Finish this sentence without making it prettier than it is:

Right now, the hardest part of being in-between is...

WAYPOINT • THE MIDDLE

The bridge is not proof that you failed to arrive.

It is the structure carrying you between realities.

MOVEMENT II • TRUST

Can You Trust Yourself Before the Evidence Arrives?

Self-trust in the In-Between is different from certainty. Certainty says, 'I know exactly what will happen.' Self-trust says, 'Whatever happens, I trust myself to meet it without abandoning what I know.'

Evidence From Me

What have I already survived, navigated, created, or figured out that proves I can meet uncertainty?

What decisions have I made before external validation arrived - and later understood more clearly?

What do I know about myself now that I no longer need my circumstances to confirm?

Identity Before Evidence

Sometimes your identity changes before your environment does. Explore the gap without letting the environment define you.

WHAT MY CURRENT CIRCUMSTANCES SAY	WHAT I KNOW ABOUT MYSELF

SOUL SIGNAL

Your circumstances can describe where you are without defining who you are.

MOVEMENT III • NAVIGATE

Move Without the Whole Map.

Crossing rarely gives you the entire route at once. Navigation is learning to work with the next visible piece without turning incomplete information into paralysis.

The Next-Step Filter

For one current decision, move through each question.

What decision or next step is actually in front of me?

What information do I genuinely need before moving?

What am I calling 'more information' that is actually reassurance?

What is the smallest useful action available now?

What can remain undecided after I take that action?

Signal or Panic?

Not every uncomfortable feeling is intuition telling you to turn around. Sometimes uncertainty activates urgency, familiarity, grief, or fear. Learn the texture of your own signals.

WHEN I FEEL...	MY FIRST IMPULSE IS...	WHAT I MAY ACTUALLY NEED...
Uncertain
Impatient
Afraid
Lonely
Behind
Tempted to go backward
Excited but unsupported

The Wrong-Turn Audit

When you think, 'Maybe I made the wrong choice,' do not immediately obey the thought. Investigate it.

What specifically is making me question the path?

Is something actually misaligned - or is the path simply uncomfortable, slow, unfamiliar, or incomplete?

What would returning backward give me immediately?

What would returning backward cost the version of me who already outgrew it?

If I could not go backward, what would I try next?

MOVEMENT IV • SUSTAIN

How Do You Keep Yourself While You Cross?

The middle can become exhausting when every day is treated like an emergency. Sustaining yourself means protecting enough energy, dignity, pleasure, structure, and connection that transition does not consume your entire identity.

Bridge Supports

What currently helps you remain yourself while circumstances are unfinished?

SUPPORT	WHAT I HAVE NOW	WHAT NEEDS MORE SUPPORT
Food / physical needs
Rest / recovery
Money / resources
Safe or supportive spaces
People / connection
Creative expression
Spiritual connection
Work / structure
Joy / pleasure / beauty

Transition Is Not Your Entire Identity

You are allowed to be a person while your life is changing. Name what still makes you feel like you - not merely like someone surviving a transition.

I feel most like myself when...

Beauty / pleasure still matters to me through...

The parts of my personality I refuse to lose in survival mode are...

One thing I can stop making harder than it already is...

SOUL SIGNAL

The goal is not to become excellent at suffering in the middle.

LANTERN • KEEP THIS WITH YOU

You do not need to prove you deserve the next chapter by surviving the bridge beautifully.

You only need to keep enough of yourself with you to recognize your life when it begins to meet you.

MOVEMENT V • KEEP MOVING

What Does Forward Look Like From Here?

Forward does not always look dramatic. Sometimes it is an application, a conversation, a boundary, a deposit, a page built, a room packed, a phone call made, a day survived without returning to what you already know is over.

Movement Log

MOVEMENT I HAVE ALREADY MADE	WHAT IT CREATED / MADE POSSIBLE

The 3 Horizons

Not everything belongs in today's hands. Place your attention where it belongs.

NOW	NEXT	LATER
What needs my attention in the next 24-72 hours?	What can I begin preparing once immediate needs are handled?	What belongs to the larger life I am building, but does not need solving today?

The No-Return Line

This is not about making rigid promises. It is about identifying what you no longer want temporary discomfort to talk you back into.

Even if the new chapter takes longer than I want, I do not want to return to...

When I am tired or scared, I am most vulnerable to abandoning myself by...

The truth I want Future Me to remember about why I crossed is...

The next honest movement available to me is...

THE CROSSING STATEMENT

I Can Move Without Having the Whole Map.

Write this in your own language. It does not need to sound spiritual, polished, or fearless. It needs to sound true.

I know I am no longer…

I know I am becoming / already am…

I do not yet know…

I trust myself to…

While I wait for my external life to catch up, I will not…

The next step I am willing to take is…

THE FAR SIDE IS BECOMING VISIBLE

Eventually the work changes.

You stop asking only, How do I survive the middle?

and begin asking,

Can my life hold what I am asking to arrive?

That question belongs to BUILD.

YOUR POSITION ON THE MAP

OUTGROW → RELEASE → CROSS → BUILD → ARRIVE

You have oriented yourself inside uncertainty, strengthened self-trust without requiring certainty, practiced navigating with partial information, identified what sustains you, and named what forward movement looks like from here.

Your next passage may be BUILD when the question begins shifting from 'Will I make it across?' to 'What structures, resources, boundaries, systems, and capacity will allow the next chapter to actually stay?'

FINAL WAYPOINT

What do I trust now that I did not trust when I entered this passage?

What evidence exists that I am already moving, even if I have not arrived?

SOUL SIGNAL

The bridge was never meant to become your identity.
It was meant to carry you somewhere.
