A QUEEN'S PEACE PALACE GUIDED WORKBOOK

THE THRESHOLD

Sometimes the first sign of a new chapter isn't knowing where you're going.

It's realizing you can no longer pretend where you are still fits.

Outgrowing can feel like restlessness, dissatisfaction, boredom, grief, irritation, guilt, or a quiet sense that something is off. Sometimes nothing is dramatically wrong. The relationship may still contain love. The job may still pay you. The city may still be beautiful. The identity may once have protected you.

And still: something inside you has moved.

OUTGROW is not here to rush you into an ending. It is here to help you recognize the mismatch clearly enough that you no longer have to confuse self-abandonment with patience.

> YOUR PURPOSE HERE
> Recognize what no longer fits, understand why, separate your identity from the chapter, accept what you already know, and choose what you are willing to acknowledge now.

THE MAP

OUTGROW → RELEASE → CROSS → BUILD → ARRIVE

You do not have to begin at the beginning of the larger journey. This passage is for the moment when you are asking: Does this still belong to who I am?

BEFORE WE BEGIN

Where Is the Misfit?

Do not start by asking what you hate. Start by noticing where your life feels smaller, tighter, flatter, or less truthful than the person you have become.

Mark each area with one of these: FITS / TIGHT / FINISHED / UNSURE.

AREA	STATUS	WHAT I NOTICE
Relationships & intimacy	_____	_____
Work / career / business	_____	_____
Home & physical environment	_____	_____
Friendships & community	_____	_____
Spiritual life & beliefs	_____	_____
Habits & routines	_____	_____
Identity & self-image	_____	_____
Lifestyle & daily rhythm	_____	_____
Dreams & future direction	_____	_____
Responsibilities & roles	_____	_____

Where does your life currently feel smaller than the person you've become?

MOVEMENT I • RECOGNIZE

Something Has Changed.

Recognition is not the same as making a decision. Before you decide what to do, give yourself permission to notice what is already happening.

The Misfit Inventory

What still genuinely fits me?

What feels increasingly tight, performative, draining, or outdated?

What feels complete - even if I have not acted on that knowledge yet?

Signs You've Been Outgrowing Something

- ☐ I feel relief when I am away from it.
- ☐ I keep trying to repair something that may simply be complete.
- ☐ I fantasize about another version of my life more often than I engage with this one.
- ☐ I need increasing amounts of energy to tolerate what used to feel normal.
- ☐ I keep explaining away a mismatch I can already feel.
- ☐ My standards, needs, boundaries, or values have changed.
- ☐ I feel guilty for wanting more because this once meant so much to me.
- ☐ I keep waiting for something terrible to happen so I can feel justified in changing.
- ☐ The role I play here no longer feels like me.
- ☐ I can appreciate what this gave me and still feel finished.

Which three signs feel most important right now - and why?

When Did I First Know?

Not when you finally admitted it. Not when somebody else noticed. When did the first signal appear?

FIRST SIGNAL

WHAT I DID WITH THAT KNOWING

WHAT KEPT ME THERE AFTER I KNEW

SOUL SIGNAL

You don't need to hate something to have outgrown it.

MOVEMENT II • UNDERSTAND

Why Doesn't This Fit Anymore?

Sometimes the situation changed. Sometimes you changed. Sometimes both did. Understanding the mismatch keeps you from turning growth into blame.

Then Me / Now Me

	THEN ME	NOW ME
What I needed
What I tolerated
What I valued
What I believed I deserved
My boundaries
My dreams
What safety meant
What success meant

What Changed?

What changed in me?

What changed in the situation, relationship, environment, or role?

What did nobody do wrong - but I can no longer ignore?

Nothing Has to Be Wrong.

Many people wait for betrayal, collapse, disrespect, failure, or catastrophe before allowing themselves to leave a chapter. But completion is not a courtroom. You do not always need evidence of wrongdoing to recognize that a season has ended.

SOUL SIGNAL Completion does not require catastrophe.

What have you been waiting to go wrong before giving yourself permission to admit what you already know?

MOVEMENT III • SEPARATE

What Is Me - and What Belongs to This Chapter?

Outgrowing a chapter can feel like losing yourself when you have spent years adapting to it. Before release comes separation: seeing which parts are truly you and which parts were required to maintain the life you were living.

Who Did I Have to Be Here?

- ☐ The fixer
- ☐ The strong one
- ☐ The easygoing one
- ☐ The caretaker
- ☐ The quiet one
- ☐ The achiever
- ☐ The available one
- ☐ The peacemaker
- ☐ The hustler
- ☐ The smaller version of myself
- ☐ The one who needed less
- ☐ Other: _____

What did this role protect, preserve, or help me survive?

Identity or Adaptation?

Choose a few qualities you have been calling 'me.' Ask whether each is identity, adaptation, or some combination of both.

QUALITY / PATTERN	IDENTITY?	ADAPTATION?	WHAT I SEE NOW

Who am I when I am not maintaining this?

What am I afraid I will lose about myself if this chapter ends?

MOVEMENT IV • ACCEPT

I Know. Can I Stop Arguing With What I Know?

Acceptance is not the same as immediate action. It is the moment you stop forcing your inner knowing to repeatedly re-prove itself.

The Negotiation Room

Circle or mark the thoughts you have used to negotiate against your own knowing.

- ☐ Maybe I'm being ungrateful.
- ☐ Maybe I should give it more time.
- ☐ Maybe I'm expecting too much.
- ☐ Maybe I'm just going through something.
- ☐ Maybe I should be happy with what I have.
- ☐ Maybe I'm asking for too much.
- ☐ Maybe leaving means I failed.
- ☐ Maybe wanting something different means I never appreciated this.
- ☐ Maybe I need one more sign.
- ☐ Other: _____

Which thought has kept you negotiating the longest? What does it protect you from having to face?

Gratitude Is Not a Contract.

You can honor what a person, place, role, identity, or season gave you without promising it the rest of your life.

What am I genuinely grateful this chapter gave me?

What do I no longer owe it simply because it once helped me?

The Cost of Staying / The Cost of Changing

Clarity gets stronger when you are willing to look at both sides. Change can cost you something. So can staying.

IF I STAY	IF I CHANGE
Energy:	Energy:
Time:	Time:
Money/resources:	Money/resources:
Relationships:	Relationships:
Self-respect/authenticity:	Self-respect/authenticity:
Opportunity:	Opportunity:
Peace:	Peace:
Other:	Other:

What becomes clearer when you allow both costs to be true?

MOVEMENT V • CHOOSE

What Am I Willing to Acknowledge Now?

OUTGROW does not require you to blow up your life. The choice may simply be to stop pretending something still fits. Honest recognition is a threshold of its own.

The Truth Page

I have outgrown...

I know because...

I've been afraid to acknowledge it because...

What this chapter gave me was...

What I no longer need from it is...

The version of myself emerging now needs...

THE THRESHOLD

Stand Here for a Moment.

You do not need a complete map of the next chapter. This page is about locating yourself honestly at the edge of the old one.

BEHIND ME	WITH ME	AHEAD OF ME
What I now know I have outgrown.	What remains true about me regardless of what happens next.	What I am now willing to make room for.

SOUL SIGNAL

You don't have to know where you're going to know that something has ended within you.

Recognition is movement.

You have reached the threshold.

YOUR POSITION ON THE MAP

OUTGROW □ → RELEASE → CROSS → BUILD → ARRIVE

You have named what no longer fits. That does not mean you must immediately know what replaces it.

If you recognize what no longer fits but still feel emotionally, practically, relationally, or energetically attached to it, your next passage may be RELEASE.

If you have already let go and now find yourself standing between the old life and the new - changed internally, but without full external evidence yet - you may already be ready for CROSS.

A FINAL CHECK-IN

What do I know now that I was still negotiating with when I began?

What am I no longer willing to call confusion?

The bridge begins the moment you stop pretending the old shore is still home.
