QUEEN'S PEACE PALACE

THE IN-BETWEEN COLLECTION

RELEASE

THE IN-BETWEEN PASSAGE

A Guided Experience for Letting Go, Clearing What No Longer Serves, and Making Space for What's Next

DECLUTTER
LET GO
CLEAR
CREATE SPACE
RESET
RECEIVE
WHAT'S NEXT

OLD STORIES
PEOPLE
PATTERNS
VERSIONS
EXPECTATIONS
FEAR
LIMITS

V

THE IN-BETWEEN COLLECTION

A QUEEN'S PEACE PALACE GUIDED WORKBOOK

PASSAGE II • RELEASE

You can know something is over and still be carrying it.

Release begins after recognition. You have named what no longer fits. Now the question changes: what is still attached to me - emotionally, practically, relationally, energetically, or through identity?

This passage is not about forcing detachment. It is about making enough room to move without dragging an entire completed chapter across the bridge.

SOUL SIGNAL

You are allowed to honor what mattered without carrying it forever.

YOUR MOVEMENT

IDENTIFY → GRIEVE → UNTANGLE → RECLAIM → LET GO

Some things leave all at once. Others leave in layers. Work honestly, not performatively.

MOVEMENT I • IDENTIFY

What Are You Actually Carrying?

A chapter can be over while its weight remains. Before releasing anything, name the forms the attachment is taking now.

The Carrying Inventory

- ☐ A person I am no longer truly connected to
- ☐ A role I no longer want to perform
- ☐ An old version of myself
- ☐ A promise or expectation
- ☐ A place or environment
- ☐ A dream that belonged to a former version of me
- ☐ Guilt about moving forward
- ☐ Anger I keep rehearsing
- ☐ A need for explanation, apology, permission, or closure
- ☐ Objects, routines, or habits that keep me psychologically anchored
- ☐ Fear that releasing means the past did not matter
- ☐ Other: _____

Which of these feels heaviest right now?

Name the Attachment, Not Just the Thing

Sometimes the person is not what you are carrying. You may be carrying the future you imagined with them. Sometimes the job is not the attachment. It is the identity, security, status, or proof it gave you.

THE THING	WHAT I MAY ACTUALLY BE ATTACHED TO

What becomes easier to understand when you name the attachment underneath the attachment?

CHECKPOINT • THE CURRENT

Release is not erasing the shore behind you.

It is deciding what belongs in your hands while you cross.

MOVEMENT II • GRIEVE

Let It Have Mattered.

Grief is not reserved for death. We grieve identities, relationships, futures, homes, versions of ourselves, expectations, and chapters we once believed would last longer.

What Am I Actually Mourning?

What did I believe this would become?

What did I love, value, or need here?

What future did I picture that I now have to release?

What part of myself existed here that I am afraid I will never feel again?

The Both/And Page

You do not have to flatten a complicated chapter into either beautiful or terrible. Let opposing truths exist together.

THIS WAS TRUE	AND THIS WAS ALSO TRUE
I loved...	And I needed...
I am grateful for...	And I am hurt by...
This gave me...	And this cost me...
Part of me wishes...	And another part knows...
I will miss...	And I will not miss...

SOUL SIGNAL

You do not have to make the past ugly in order to leave it behind.

MOVEMENT III • UNTANGLE

What Is Mine to Carry Forward?

Untangling separates love from obligation, memory from assignment, responsibility from guilt, and lessons from lifelong attachment.

Mine / Theirs / No Longer Needed

MINE TO CARRY	THEIRS TO CARRY	NO LONGER NEEDED

The Invisible Agreements

Some attachments survive because an old agreement is still running underneath them.

- ☐ I must stay available to prove I care.
- ☐ If I move on, I am betraying what we had.
- ☐ I need them to understand me before I can be free.
- ☐ I need an apology before I can close this.
- ☐ I must keep this role because people depend on me.
- ☐ I cannot change my mind after investing this much.
- ☐ I owe this chapter loyalty because it once saved me.
- ☐ If I stop struggling with it, I am saying what happened was okay.
- ☐ I need to carry the pain so I do not repeat the lesson.
- ☐ Other: _____

Which agreement are you ready to stop renewing?

PAUSE • OPEN HANDS

Some things do not need to be thrown away.

They only need to stop being held so tightly.

MOVEMENT IV • RECLAIM

Take Yourself Back With You.

Release is not only about what leaves. It is also about what returns to you: time, attention, energy, desire, identity, imagination, choice.

What Comes Back to Me?

WHEN I STOP CARRYING...	I GET BACK...
This responsibility / role:	Time:
This emotional loop:	Attention:
This expectation:	Choice:
This old identity:	Possibility:
This attachment:	Energy:
This fear:	Movement:

What part of yourself has been waiting for your energy to come home?

The Carry Forward List

You are not crossing empty-handed. Keep what became wisdom, capacity, love, discernment, skill, memory, or truth.

HERE	I CARRY FORWARD

SOUL SIGNAL

You are not leaving empty-handed. You are leaving without the weight.

MOVEMENT V • LET GO

Release Without Erasing.

Letting go is not a performance of being over it. It is a change in relationship. Something can remain meaningful without remaining in control of your present.

What Does Release Mean Here?

- ☐ I stop checking for proof that I mattered.
- ☐ I stop waiting for permission to move forward.
- ☐ I stop rehearsing the same argument internally.
- ☐ I change a practical routine that keeps me attached.
- ☐ I allow the memory to exist without treating it as instruction.
- ☐ I stop volunteering for a role I have already outgrown.
- ☐ I return responsibility that was never mine.
- ☐ I allow unanswered questions to remain unanswered.
- ☐ I make physical room for what comes next.
- ☐ My version of release: _____

What would be different in my actual daily life if I were no longer carrying this?

THE RELEASE STATEMENT

Name What You Are Setting Down.

This is not a promise that you will never feel it again. It is a declaration of what you no longer intend to organize your life around.

I release the responsibility to…

I release the expectation that…

I release the version of me who had to…

I keep the lesson that…

I keep the love / wisdom / truth that…

I make room now for…

THE EDGE OF THE BRIDGE

You do not have to feel nothing before you move.

You only need enough of yourself back to take the next step.

YOUR POSITION ON THE MAP

OUTGROW → RELEASE → CROSS → BUILD → ARRIVE

You have identified what remained attached, allowed the loss to matter, separated what belongs to you from what does not, reclaimed what returns to you, and named what you are setting down.

Your next passage may be CROSS if the old chapter is no longer home but the new life has not fully appeared yet. CROSS is the territory of self-trust without complete external evidence.

FINAL CHECKPOINT

What feels lighter - even if it is not completely gone?

What am I carrying forward because it is wisdom, not weight?

SOUL SIGNAL

Leaving with love does not require staying until everything is resolved.

QUEENS PEACE PALACE
The In-Between • Passage II: RELEASE